

A Night Above

It had to be the stars
the sun made the solar setting across the sky and it cut the surface making you glance up.
Sun allows us to car wash
as the clouds open and spark.

The drops from the hose spark the concrete. Open up the stars and let them continue to wash the universe. This great a setting.
Just the chance to look up.
Diamonds are here to be cut.

The banker needs someone to cut a deal that will help spark his pockets. Continue to go up until you're eye level with stars.
People-they're different, but the setting stays the same, let it wash.

Water is pure, it can wash over me. I start to cut and strip myself in this setting.
Reborn again, I feel the spark of the night and see stars staring back as I look up.

There's nowhere to go but up.
That's what they say. The wash sound is water, silence is stars.
They blink and begin to cut the night. They shine and spark.
It creates a most glorious setting.

More to it than the setting allows us to be lifted up, and taken far away to spark other places where we can wash grass that is ready to cut.
Once again, we lay under stars.

The setting helps us to wash the world so we may cut up a spark for us-stars.
